Total Disaster.

Havent been able to play a single hand online or offline.

The game always freezes when it's my turn both online and offline.

The only way to leave the table is to close the game because the YES button doesnt work.

Jesus Christ I can finally "call" for once now without freezing after reinstall, but then it freezes again

Penny Arcade is a web-comic that follows Tycho and Gabe through various scenarios. And they've been put into a game where Tycho is trying to end the universe before anyone else gets the opportunity.

Now, I haven't played the first two games but I don't feel that missing out on them is too big a worry for these, they're still highly enjoyable. It's an RPG, turn based combat. There's a load of classes atop the main class for each character. Tycho's a scholar, Moira's a Gumshoe, Jim is a Necromaster and Gabe is... well, Gabe (I forgot what his class is).

The story is humorous, the same humor that you get from Cthulhu Saves the World only not as meta (until the fourth one but that's another game review).

If you've played any old school RPG like Final Fantasy before it went 3D, or anything along similar lines, I recommend this to you.

Repetitive, forces you to replay levels in order to get collectibles to continue playing, and clunky at times. Wouldn't recommend.. Great potential, but:

- enemy overlap sometimes makes targeting difficult; this art style does not allow for so many overlapping enemies on a single lane the sprites hit boxes are too large
- lane switching is way too fiddly; I don't want to have to waste an attack in order to then "bubble-sort" my heroes; why is it not possible to switch lane outside of attack animations?
- the drag-n-drop lane switching is unnecessarily convoluted; one-click lane switching would have been way more convenient [not actually true, see edit below]
- I can't for the life of me figure out how to switch lanes when a hero is not in an attack animation; it might not even be possible, which makes dealing with some randomly teleporting enemies a total gamble
- the music is repetitive and uninspired; I get that the overall satire, but there's really not need to vex me with that stupid flute and same-y trumpet

DEFINITELY not worth the $20 asking price, but it could have been and that's a damn shame.

====== REVIEW UPDATE ======

A couple of super helpful people have pointed out a few things, which calls for an update of this review. Here goes:

I previously implied that lane switching could only be done through drag-n-drop; this is not true, lane switching can apparently also be done by scrolling with the mousewheel, which is significantly better than drag-n-drop, I imagine.

Concerning lane switching being impossible outside of attack animations, I should clarify: I understand that it's intentional, I just don't think that it works well. I imagine this would have been experimented with at prototype phase and isn't an oversight. It's not that I can't fight with this mechanic in place, but when the thing you have to do is match your attacks to armor values there emerge many situations where I have to waste attacks and this completely breaks my flow. Maybe I'm jut that bad at puzzles, but I don't think so, it's not that complex a mechanic, it's just... annoying for me.

I have NOT played two hundred hours of this game. I have played a total of maybe five-ish hours.

I still don't think $20 is a fair price for this game.. gameplay graphic bad and boring. Great game! playable with keyboard but better with controller. Hours and hours of fun here.. Made that red haired girl fall into a pit of zombies 10/10. Bad graphics, unresponsive controls and a general lack of direction make this game one to avoid.

Did not enjoy anything about it
